Chief Field Naturalist
Says Decision Of State Game
Board Is Good Policy.

A serious over-abundance of deer in Pennsylvania, resulting in widespread starvation of the animals themselves in addition to extensive damage to trees, shrubbery and farm crops and consequent food shortages for other animals, is reported in a survey made by Vernon Bailey, chief field naturalist, bureau of biological survey, Washington. The investigation was made independently at the request of the state game commission.

The investigation centered in Mifflin, Center, Clearfield and Elk counties, where the main deer ranges are located, but also included numerous other sections.

"The whole trouble comes down to a condition of overstocking of the range with deer," Mr. Bailey's report, received yesterday, reads.

"From life-long observations on the food habits of deer over practically all of the United States, I am aware of their varied food habits, but never before have I found them in one locality feeding on so many different kinds of vegetation," he said.

Damage To Trees And Shrubs

Extirpation over wide areas of arbutus, wintergreen, club mosses, rhododendron and laurel was found by the investigator, and extensive damages to white pine, hemlock, chestnut, red maple, striped maple, black birch, sumach, devil's club, sweet fern, blueberry bushes and huckleberry bushes were noted. A large number of other plants were found to be less seriously damaged.

Few farm crops were exempt from ravages by the starving deer, according to the report. Corn, buckwheat, oats, beans, cabbage, potatoes, sweet potatoes, apples and grapes are all relished by the animals, it was pointed out.

Ninety-five percent of a recent planting of 5000 pine and spruce seedlings in one district was destroyed and the few remaining were not expected to last until next spring, Mr. Bailey testified. He estimated that there were 45,000 bucks in the state, and that there were twenty-five does to every buck, indicating more than a million does present on the deer ranges. State game commission figures agreed with these.

Small Game Suffer

Grouse, pheasants, turkeys, quail, rabbits and other small game were enumerated as among those suffering by the over-abundance of deer. Similar food materials are accountable for the situation, it was pointed out.

"The present need seems to be for less and greater numbers of bucks," he said. "This could be accomplished by an open season on does, which, besides reducing their numbers, would scatter them over a much wider area and make them wild. The proportion of bucks should ultimately be not less than one to three does."

Hunting one sex at a time is the greatest protection against hunting accidents, he asserted. Shooting at any deer, without first ascertaining the sex, results in a large number of fatalities to hunters.

Introduction of additional plants suitable for deer food and a variety of game animals were suggested as economy measures for food range.

AIRCRAFT WILL BE GOVERNED BY MYRIAD RULES

Aeronautics Commission To Insist On Rigid Examination For Fliers.

Harrisburg, June 7.—Rated and licensed airports, airplanes, pilots and mechanics, all governed by rigid regulations, will become operative in Pennsylvania July 1, under a code adopted here yesterday by the State Aeronautics Commission. The commission was created by the last session of the State Legislature.

A double check on aircraft used in commercial transportation was provided for, the commission requiring that all such planes be licensed by the Department of Internal Affairs and carry a certificate of public convenience, issued by the Public Service Commission.

Tests for Pilots

All pilots must pass a physical examination, a test on air traffic rules and a test on maneuvers, the latter similar to the one now required of motor drivers by the State Highway Department but described as much more rigid.

The new rules are intended to make aviation safe and stable, "so people will be anxious to fly," according to members of the commission. The code agrees with Federal air regulations, and is particularly adapted to the state, the commissioners said.

It applies to all aircraft operating over the state when the point of origin is within the state, and includes instruction of students and the operation of aircraft by owners for pleasure or business. Planes engaged in interstate commerce are exempt.

Under the new regulations flying circuses entering the state for exhibition purposes must obtain a permit from the Public Service Commission. Aircraft operating in the state must have the Pennsylvania license number, preceded by the letter "P," and enclosed in a keystone, painted on the fuselage. Frequent inspections by the Department of Internal Affairs are provided for.

A minimum height of 1000 feet is required over congested settlements and assemblies of persons, and of 500 feet elsewhere. All maneuvers must be conducted at a height of more than fifteen hundred feet, and 2000 feet over highways, and are banned over settlements, open-air assemblies of people and within 1000 feet of airports.

Special Authority

Dropping of objects from the air is prohibited except in the interest of safety for passengers and pilot. Special authority is required for the transportation of explosives other than fuel and signals.

Pilots are divided into four classes: Transport pilots of 200 hours' solo flying, limited commercial pilots of 200 hours' experience but limited in flying area, industrial pilots of fifty hours, and private pilots of ten hours. The latter two may not transport passengers for hire, and private pilots are barred from hauling freight.

Pilots are required to keep an accurate record of their flying time. Engine mechanics, of two time. Engine mechanics, of two time. Engine mechanics, of two time. Engine mechanics, of two time. Engine mechanics, of two time.

Queen Of Diamonds Returns To Curtiss Field After Being Lost 6 Hours.

Curtiss Field, June 7.—(AP)—After 6 hours in the air during part of which time it was lost in the fog, the monoplane Columbia returned to Curtiss Field today, having been unable to find its way to Old Orchard, Maine, on the first leg of a trans-Atlantic flight.

Miss Mabel Boll, sponsor of the flight, and popularly known as the "queen of diamonds," expressed disappointment that the first short leg of the long journey should have been unsuccessful, but said that it would have no effect on her determination to go through with the flight.

She said that if weather conditions improve another takeoff would be made this afternoon. The Columbia, loaned to Miss Boll for her trans-Atlantic flight by Charles A. Levine, who flew in it to Germany last summer with Clarence Chamberlain, had hopped off from Roosevelt field at 6:14 o'clock this morning.

PAIR INJURED
AS CARS CRASH
NORTH OF HERE

John Wills Taken To Warner Hospital Following Collision This Afternoon.

John Wills, Gettysburg rural mail carrier, and his chauffeur, Roy Hull, also of Gettysburg, suffered injuries, the extent of which are not yet determined, when the light coupe in which they were riding was struck on the Harrisburg road, six miles north of here, this afternoon.

Hull was brought to the office of a local physician by passing motorists, and later it was expected that he would be taken to the Warner hospital. The Gettysburg ambulance was sent to bring Wills to the hospital. He appeared to be suffering chiefly from shock, it was stated.

At the Warner hospital, it was said that only Mr. Wills was admitted to the institution. He is suffering from injuries to the head and body, but principally from shock, hospital authorities said. His condition is not serious, it was stated.

According to Patrolman Achenbach, of the local substation of the highway motor patrol, who investigated the accident, Hull's light car was struck by a heavy sedan, driven by Maurice Cronin, of Pittsburgh, as the former was about to turn off the Harrisburg road.

The impact turned the lighter car over several times, and wrecked it badly. The heavy machine was only slightly damaged, and was able to proceed to Gettysburg under its own power.

Mr. Wills was nearing the end of his mail route. The machine was turning left off the Harrisburg road when it was struck. The undelivered mail was brought to Gettysburg and will be taken out by a substitute carrier Friday.

Mr. Wills, who has been off duty in recent weeks on account of lumbago, has had Mr. Hull driving his machine for him for three or four weeks.

Tucks And Jabots

Give This Frock

Thin Lines

"If you won't diet, Madame," this design seems to say, "at least you can wear me." For the matron as well as the maid may wear pleats because they are not bulky and carry out the straight lines which are important to looking slim. The long vestee cut the figure very becomingly and the soft jabots take away the severity of this simple frock. The narrow tucks and tab cuffs are very good. In choosing a material, crepe de chine, georgette or crepe rous is suitable and may have the vestee and collar of the same material in harmonizing color; or soft light weight satin or silk crepe with georgette in harmonizing color.

COMMUNICATION

"LEST WE FORGET"

To the Editor: Gettysburg Times, Gettysburg, Pa.

In view of the many comments about the observance of Memorial Day in Gettysburg, I wish to set forth a few statistics about the nation's participation in the Civil War, the Spanish-American conflict and the World War.

Sixty years ago Memorial Day was born. May 30th was set aside for the decoration of the graves of those who died for their country. At that time Memorial Day was for the Union soldiers of the Civil War alone, but with the passing of years it has become universal and the country now recognizes it as the occasion for paying tribute to all who have served the nation in time of war.

Veterans of the Spanish and World Wars stand side by side with the few remaining survivors of the great civil strife. To the men of the Union Army who fought under the great commanders of the Civil War we owe our present prosperous country, the richest and most powerful in the world.

To the victory of the volunteers of 1898, we owe our position as a first-class power in the family of nations. The feats of our Army and Navy in that brief struggle showed to the world that we were able to cope with any emergency thrust upon us and we emerged a power to be dealt with on an equality with the other great nations. Many of them did not die in the service, but all of them stood ready to make the greatest of all sacrifices had it been required.

The Civil War: Period of war, four years; number of men, 2,213,365; number of deaths, 349,941; average service, 11 months; pay of soldier, $13 per month; bonus, $300 to $600; war cost U. S., $8,500,000,000; value of property acquired, none; volunteers in service, 62 per cent; drafted into service, 38 per cent; in foreign service, Navy only.

The Spanish-American War: Period of war, four years, two months; number of men, 458,151; number of deaths, not known, over 6,000; average service, 14 months; pay of soldier, $15 per month; no bonus; war cost U. S., $1,200,000,000, including payment to Spain; value of property acquired, $8,000,000,000; volunteers in service, 100 per cent; drafted into service, none; in foreign service, 61 per cent.

The World War: Period of war, one year, seven months; number of men, 5,019,874; number of deaths, about 50,000; average service, nine months; pay of soldier, $30 per month, $15 to wife or parents; war cost U. S., $50,168,625,000; value of property acquired, none; volunteers in service, 36 per cent; drafted into service, 64 per cent; in foreign service, 46 per cent.

The death rate for first months of Spanish-American War was 25 per 1000, and for the World War was 8 per 1000.

The average weight muster out of Spanish-American War loss of 28 pounds per man, and for the World War a gain of 12 pounds per man.

Percentage of men, women and children freed as a result of war: Revolutionary War, 12.68 per cent; Civil War, 11.31 per cent, and the Spanish-American War, 31.93 per cent.

From these statistics it can be readily seen that the Spanish-American soldier obtained some benefits for his country.

Our part in the World War was further evidence of the fact that the rights of our citizens must be respected. In 1898, our people demanded that we go to war to free the Cuban people from the yoke of tyranny placed thereon by the Monarchy of Spain.

In 1917, our peace loving people became convinced that the house of Hohenzollern was a menace to the peace of the world and dangerous to the rights of others and again responded to the call of humanity and willingly sacrificed her sons in the line of duty. It was a united America that was enabled to turn the tide of battle in the World War and write finis to "Kultur."

Now one knows the horror of war

PACIFIC PLANE HELD BY TIDE

Southern Cross Unable to Take-off Until Sea Becomes Calmed.

Suva, Fiji, June 7.—(AP)—The monoplane Southern Cross rested on the sands of Nasalai beach today, awaiting the ebb of tide to permit it to hop off toward Australia, the last leg of its trans-Pacific flight.

The plane was to start at 2 p. m., 6 p. m. Pacific coast time. An unruly surf prevented the plane from starting yesterday afternoon. When the government steamer Pioneer arrived at Nasalai with 800 gallons of gasoline the work of transporting it to shore was made slow and difficult by a rough sea. So great was the delay that darkness found the tide coming in.

When it was decided that the Southern Cross would have to wait another day the plane was hauled above the high water line and made safe for the night.

BRITAIN BARS HARRY K. THAW

Conviction of Major Crime Keeps Millionaire American Out of England.

Southampton, Eng., June 7.—(AP)—Harry K. Thaw, who has figured on American front pages for the last twenty years, was refused entrance to England yesterday and is aboard the Aquitania, awaiting the return of that ship to New York.

Thaw had sent his baggage ashore and was starting down the gangplank of the Aquitania when he was stopped by C. H. Stephens, inspector of immigration, and quietly told he would not be permitted to land.

Thaw appeared dumbfounded, and Stephens handed him a written order from the home office affirming the action. This the American read slowly and turned and went back aboard the ship, disappearing in a corridor leading to his cabin.

Action Complete Surprise The action of the home office came without previous warning and was entirely unexpected here. Thaw had sailed from New York after obtaining a British visa to his passport with the word that he was going to Europe for a "holiday," expecting to spend three weeks in London, Paris and Vienna.

It was not until late yesterday that the English statutory basis for his exclusion was divulged by home office officials, this being the act providing a person may be allowed to enter England only if he has not been sentenced in a foreign country for some crime for which he might have been extradited from England under the extradition act of 1879-1906.

Thaw, son of a Pittsburgh millionaire, gained international prominence in June, 1906, when he shot and killed Stanford White, noted architect. In his trial he said his action had been based on a confession by his wife, who was Evelyn Nesbit, chorus girl, concerning alleged relations with White prior to her marriage.

Continues Meteoric Career He was committed to the prison for the insane at Matteawan, but in 1915 escaped, only to be captured shortly afterward in Canada after a sensational chase. After a lengthy litigation, he obtained his freedom. For a while he lived quietly, but more than a year ago appeared once more in the newspapers in stores of his return to night-club life in New York. Englishmen here recalled in connection with his nonadmission the refusal of the United States to allow the Countess of Cathcart to enter in 1926, the exclusion being based on charges she had committed a crime involving "moral turpitude." The Countess Cathcart, however, later was admitted for a brief stay in America.

GLORIOUS BETSY

NOVELIZED BY
ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1928, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"GLORIOUS BETSY," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. production of this novel. Based on the play by Rida Johnson Young.

SYNOPSIS
The bewitching Betsy Patterson is staying at Sweet Springs Inn with her father and aunt. Surrounded by eager admirers she is secretly attracted to the handsome La Vert, her French tutor, who, unknown to her, has fought and won a duel in her behalf earlier in the story. Two French officers arrive at the inn while she is preparing for a lesson with La Vert. She is angry when he leaves her abruptly and does not see the officers salute. They greet La Vert as the runaway Captain Jerome Bonaparte, brother and American ambassador of Napoleon. He pleads with them for another week incognito at the Springs.

St. Pierre looked at Dufresne, puzzled as to how to proceed in the matter. "Mon Capitaine," he began, "Napoleon has sent to us his special envoy, M. De Langle. We have received your brother's instructions, which are, that you sail for France immediately upon the conclusion of the festivities arranged by the Ex-Minister Monroe of Baltimore."

Jerome gasped. Sail for France—now! He couldn't—he wouldn't. Now—just when his hopes had risen. Why, that very morning Betsy—Miss Betsy, he corrected himself—had held out promises of dreams fulfilled. Only a few more days of this masquerade, and then he would know what he wanted to know. A little time was all he asked—just a little time. But not to return to France. Not now.

"Return to France!" he gasped. The words that had been tumbling about in his mind dropped from his lips with all seriousness. "Return to France—and not see Miss Betsy again—ever—Ah, St. Pierre, can you not realize what this means to me?" He appealed pathetically to the more sympathetic of the two soldiers.

"You may not evade your destiny, Captain Bonaparte," St. Pierre shook his head. "It is arranged that you marry the Princess Friedericka of Wurtemberg. This marriage is for France!" The last sentence was spoken with a proud determination.

"Well," Jerome sighed and shrugged his shoulders, "since I am to do so much for France in the future, surely I may do something for myself in the present. Ah—no—no!" He shook his head as St. Pierre and Dufresne both started to speak. "I shall not further distress you, my good friends. You may rely on me. But one more lesson with my pupil, I beg of you. For the rest of my life, I shall belong to France. Allow me but this one more hour for—myself."

As Jerome stood pleading the great voice of Major Patterson came mumbled along the hallway, and that gentleman walked out on to the porch. He looked at the visitors with little curiosity, more interested in reading the letters he carried. But as he reached the group, Jerome halted him.

"One moment, Monsieur," the man whom Patterson knew as La Vert, the French tutor, stopped him. "May I humbly crave the honor of presenting two of my fellow countrymen, M. Dufresne and M. St. Pierre. My employer, M. Patterson, gentlemen, he turned to his visitors.

The military gentlemen bowed, clicking their heels together. Major Patterson grunted.

"What! More Frenchmen? The Springs will presently become impossible for a plain American," he grumbled. "Gad, I can have no peace here at all. My parlor crowded with Betty's friends—more Frenchmen around the Springs!" he passed on, still mumbling.

"Ah, truly it is the delight of my life to anger him," Jerome looked after the figure, laughing. "He pays me and he treats me like a—what they call—nigger. Should he discover who I am—it would throw him into apoplexy." He threw back his head and laughed heartily. "Is the daughter, your pupil, like her father?" Dufresne demanded, scowling after Patterson.

"Betsy? Ah, no—no!" Jerome smiled, his dark eyes dreaming far away again. "She is like no one you have ever seen before." St. Pierre and Dufresne exchanged a quiet smile. "Fire and ice she is! Gracious and haughty! Sweet and imperious! Proud as the devil! She is like a queen—an empress! She was born to command—and all mean to follow, like humble, unquestioning slaves. Ah, glorious Betsy is perfection!"

"But you forget, sir, that you are the brother of the First Consul of France!" Dufresne interrupted the eulogy to the charms of the Baltimore Belle.

"Unfortunately, you will never allow me to forget that," Jerome retorted, smiling. "I should be more than glad, if it were possible."

"However, it is not," Dufresne answered. "How soon can you be ready to sail?"

"Gentlemen, please," Jerome shook his head. "Just this once—it will not matter—out of a lifetime. Just one hour—and then you shall command me as you will. For one hour permit me to be Monsieur La Vert, and I shall ask nothing more, I promise. I swear it."

Dufresne and St. Pierre looked at each other. And St. Pierre nodded his head in acquiescence. "For one hour, then," he agreed. "And then you will be ready to leave for Baltimore?"

"One hour!" Jerome held up his hand. "One hour, and I shall be ready. You will find entertainment within, gentlemen," he motioned towards the bar. "For one more hour I am Monsieur La Vert."

They nodded their heads in agreement and sought the pleasantly cool interior of the hostelry.

CHAPTER VI

With quick steps Jerome sought the Patterson suite. He hurried down the long hallway, but as he reached the door he paused and then slowly turned the big, brass handle of the double doors. He walked into the room with an outwardly unperturbed manner that belied his inner emotions. Betsy and Mary were seated in a corner of the room, surrounded by a group of laughing, admiring men. Betsy, as usual was dominating the conversation, like a queen in the midst of her court. All eyes followed her every movement; all ears hung on her every word; all lips took their cue from her speeches. And Jerome waited, gazing over her shoulder. Sensing his presence, Betsy turned quickly. She looked at him for a moment, and then deliberately averted her head. She laughed and talked with even more volubility. But Jerome, undaunted, sauntered slowly across the room and stood behind his erstwhile pupil. Mistress Betsy ran on as though there had been no interruption. Hesitatingly, the tutor leaned over her shoulder.

"Pardon, Ma'mselle," he began, "but I am ready for the lesson."

Betsy turned her shapely head and glanced at her tutor calmly and coldly.

"You forget, Sir!" Her voice was icy. "That is for me to say." She turned back to her friends, who stared at this intruder with hostile eyes. The intruder merely bowed, turned on his heel, and stepped through the window, leaving a rather puzzled Betsy behind.

"And then what happened, Betty," one of the admirers begged for the continuation of the story.

"Then Auntie Ellen went to papa, and—"

"But Betty's voice was lost in the sudden opening of the door and the heavy voice of her father.

"Betsy! Ellen! Great News!" he shouted, waving a letter in his hand, and rushing to his daughter, his face as red as ever. "Great news!" He spluttered in his excitement.

"News! What is it, Papa?" Betsy jumped up excitedly.

"We are to see him—entertain him—Minister Monroe has arranged it—" Patterson was bursting with his triumph.

"Him? Who?" Miss Massenhild, properly chaperoning her niece's morning entertainment, too, jumped up from her rocking chair in the corner where she had been quietly snatching "forty winks."

"Has arranged what?" Betsy's eyes were sparkling. "Let me see, papa," she reached for the letter, but the Major flattered it above her head.

"What you most longed for," he caught his daughter's hand. "We are to see him—you are to be his hostess—Think of it—the hostess of Jerome Bonaparte!" Betsy exclaimed.

Do you enjoy your food?

If you do not enjoy your food it is a true sign that you are losing your appetite. And when your appetite is "gone" it means you haven't the resistance to ward off disease. Loss of appetite is only a symptom. General weakness pervades the entire body. There is no desire to work or play.

Rich, red, blood builds and sustains
Your physician will tell you that lowered vitality is the result of an insufficient supply of red blood cells—those vitalizing elements in the blood that nourish and sustain the body.

When you get your red blood cells back up to normal, that sluggish, let-down feeling, loss of appetite, rheumatism, boils, pimples, and skin troubles disappear. You get hungry again; sleep soundly; solid flesh takes the place of that which was once flabby. You feel strong; and your nerves become steady.

Seventy-Sixth Commencement.

The seventy-sixth annual commencement of Gettysburg college is being held this week and many of the alumni and friends are here for the occasion. The graduating class numbers sixty-four, the largest in the history of the institution, and the commencement promises to be the most successful ever held.

The baccalaureate sermon was delivered Sunday morning in the College church by Rev. L. B. Wolf, D. D., class of '80, lately of Guntur, India. The sermon was a most impressive and able one.

During the services Miss Susanna Richards sang "Jesus Saviour, Thee I Love," and Miss Richards and I. L. Taylor sang "Savior, Blessed Redeemer." Both numbers were beautiful.

At the evening service the church was again filled. Rev. D. Frank Garland, of Dayton, Ohio, made the address to the College Young Men's Christian Association. Miss Richards sang "The Good Shepherd" and "Hold Thou My Hand," and the college quartet sang "Sweet Sabbath Eve."

At the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees President Hefelbower announced that an additional gift of $100,000 was given by John E. Firch, a wealthy mine owner, of Oakland, California. The money is to be used to erect a science building and is to be available within the next four years.

Last evening the 50th anniversary exercises of Xi chapter of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity took place in Brua chapel and a concert was given by the Fifth Maryland Regiment band.

Engagement Announced.—An announcement has been made of the engagement of Dr. Henry C. Earnshaw, Philadelphia, son of Mrs. George Earnshaw, formerly of this place, and Miss Rachel B. Tatnall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tatnall, of Bryn Mawr. The young people have been prominent in several fashionable societies of Philadelphia. The father of the bride is one of the vice presidents of the Pennsylvania railroad.

Concert a Success.—Brua Chapel was filled last Tuesday evening with people to hear the first concert given by the Gettysburg Oratorio society and all present were delighted. About sixty persons were on the stage and the singing was excellent. Prof. Harold S. Lewars, the director, and all who took part acquitted themselves well.

The solos by Miss Susanna Barr Richards, of Potstown, were a feature of the event. The Oratorio society was accompanied by Miss Annie W. Horner and Mark K. Eckert at the piano. Prof. Lewars played the accompaniments for Miss Richards.

As a whole the concert was a most delightful event. Those who sang were: Mrs. J. A. Holtzworth, Mrs. J. I. Mumper, Mrs. C. F. Solt, Mrs. Roy Zinn, Mrs. Edward Pfeffer, Mrs. Calvin K. Gilbert, Mrs. William D. Gilbert, Mrs. Grimm, Mrs. Henry Anstadt, Mrs. John L. Sheads, Misses Anna Hollebaugh, Ruth McIlhenny, Daisy Wentz, Julia Gilbert, Mary Benner, Frances Fritchey, Margie Trostle, Mary Sheads, Carrie Miller, Edna Pfeffer, Mary Ramer, Verna Speese, Louise Stahle, Mary Wilson, Bessie Berger, Mary Himes, Roba Miller, Ivy Tawney, Emma Cobean, Frances McClean, Elsie Tawney, Mabel Forney, Flo Blocher, Grace Sachs, Anna Gilliland, Margaret Gilliland, Bessie VanCleave, Bertha Weikert, Hattie McClellan, Josephine Forney, Wilanna Miller, Kathleen Power, Elsie Singmaster, Rev. Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest

TWILIGHT

There come to me a few glad moments, when
The busy day is ended, and I stray
Into the garden, shut away from men
And all their tasks and all the sports they play.

The birds are homing for the coming night,
The air is still and peaceful and serene,
But there's a beauty in the fading light
Which at the moon of day is seldom seen.

Pansies and poppies, peonies and phlox,
All with a long day's toil complete to view!
Trees which have stood perennial storms and shocks
Old as the world, yet always young and new.

I walk among them where the shadows fall,
And seem to feel in touch with things divine,
Who knows, but I am brother to them all,
Brother to blue-bell, rose and columbine?

In the melodrama at Wild Onion Friday night, when the girl heroine, Miss Peachie Sims, caught Ellick Helwanger, the villain, talking to the other woman, she told him to go and never let her see his face again, and after that he walked hand-in-hand before whenever he met her on the stage.

They are going to have company next Sunday at the home of Atlas Peek, and his wife has already spoken for Mrs. Clab Hancock's wedding knives and forks. She spoke early before anybody else wanted to borrow them.

The Hog Ford preacher finds that after all, most of the folks that come to church every Sunday are trying to act better than those who never come.

The Only Way to End Indigestion

Remove the Cause and You Remove the Pain

Nine-tenths of digestive troubles are caused by food fermentation and excess acid in the stomach, and it is only by ending these conditions that permanent relief can be hoped for.

The quickest, safest, and surest way to do this is to take a little Mayr's Wonderful Remedy for a few days. This not only stops fermentation and neutralizes excess acid, but exerts a soothing, healing and strengthening influence on the weakened stomach, and induces normal healthy digestion. That is why druggists everywhere recommend Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. Follow their sound advice—get a bottle from your druggist at once, insure stomach health, with the fear of indigestion banished forever. Special agent: People's Drug Store.—adv.

Down in the meadow, green and moist,
Are blooming wild roses of June,
While the Bubbling Brook o'er its pebbly bed
Is crooning a silvery tune.

Yes, it is the month of roses, for June, the sweetest daughter of the year, has scattered them all over Rabbit Land.

And now, let's see what our little rabbits are doing, for we left dear Uncle Lucky and his bunny nephew talking to Teddy Turtle in the last story. Well, they must have reached home safely, for as I sat down to write, Uncle Lucky was tooting his horn at the dear Old Bramble Patch. "I declare!" he exclaimed, as he hopped, "if the Old Red Rooster doesn't take better care of my car, I'll report him to the Policeman Dog," which the old gentleman bunny would have been perfectly right in doing, for the Luckymobile cushions were as dusty as could be, plainly showing that the lazy old fowl hadn't brushed them off with his feather duster tail.

"I'll clean them," shouted the little bunny, hopping out of the bramble bushes. And in less time than I can take to tell it, that nimble little rabbit did a better job than the old Red Rooster could have done in a week's time. Then into the Luckymobile hopped the two little bunnies.

"Goodby, Mother, we'll be home safe and sound tonight. Tell Red Rooster not to shirk. But hurry up and do his work while we're out of sight."

shouted the bunny boy in poetry as the Luckymobile sped up the Old Cow Path through the Sunny Meadow.

Pretty soon, not so very far, they came to a little tent by the roadside. Right in front of it sat a Billy Goat with a drum. At once the little rabbit stopped the car, for he was at the wheel, because dear Uncle Lucky had a touch of rheumatism in his left hind toe. "Hello," cried the bunny boy. "What's your name?"

"Billy, the Drummer Kid—that's my name. I belong to the Goatville Boy Scouts."

"Good for you," laughed Uncle Lucky, and the dear, generous old gentleman rabbit took a cough drop from his vest pocket and a ten cent gold piece from another and handed them to the little billy goat.

"Thank you, Mr. Lucky Left-hindfoot. I'm going right down to the Three-in-One Cent Store to buy a uniform," and the bunny boy tossed his drum into his little tent.

"Hold on. We'll take you to the village," cried kind Uncle Lucky. "Jump in!" Then away went the speedy Luckymobile to Rabbitville. It took the happy little goat but a few minutes to buy his uniform. He knew just what he wanted, 'deed he did. Then out he came, with a hop, skip and jump to show it to the two little rabbits.

"Fine and dandy," cried Uncle Lucky. And then back to his tent skipped the little goat and away went the two little rabbits in their speedy car right into the next story.

ANTI-HOOVER FORCES BEGIN

Combination to Oppose Secretary of Commerce Effects Organization.

Kansas City, June 7.—(AP)—The field of opponents to Herbert Hoover completed an organization here today in an effort to prevent him from being nominated in the Republican national convention next week.

With the perfection of the organization the combined field decided also to carry before the credential committee the fight it lost before the Republican national committee when contests were brought for seats on the convention floor. Hoover forces picked up more than 60 pledged votes in the contest defeating untrained or hostile delegations.

Former Governor Hyde, of Missouri, has been retained by the combine to press the fight against the national committee's decision before the credential committee.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE ESSENTIALS

WHEN you come to think it over, everything in life seems to be run on the selective basis. We select our friends. The business man selects his workers. We look about us and select those things in life which appeal to our love of beauty. We surround ourselves with that which is able to make us happy.

But the big and important affair is to so select that we own, and become a part of that which we choose. Not the hoped for things wholly, but the essential things. Those things which enrich and strengthen us.

It often takes a great deal of courage to forego that which is not essential. But it pays.

That man or woman is happy who is able to reach out and sift the real from the unreal. We are not all able to do this at once. It often takes years for us to appreciate values and become able to appraise them.

This is one reason why the full life is always interesting and inspiring. Today I talked with a man who was a great inspiration to me in my boy days. I never expected to meet him. In my library are many books which he illustrated. He is one of the great artists of America. And when I met him and learned what a fine character he had and how mellowed and beautiful his mind was, I felt a beauty flowing into my own life.

To gather the essentials as we journey along, and treasure them, is to be truly one of the important of the earth.

Most of us carry too much along with us. The only things that really count are these essentials. The great life needs no heavy equipment. Big tasks are achieved where the man or woman is not over encumbered.

A friend or two. A book or two. But a whole world of thoughts spread out—a life of scattered deeds. An unspooled mind, fed by a heart warm with the urge to love and give.

WESTERN GIRL STRENGTHENED

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Manchester, So. Dakota.—"I was in a terribly weak and run-down condition when a friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I began taking it and after a short time I felt better. We are a family of five and live on a 360-acre farm, so I have quite a good deal to do both indoors and out. At first I was unable to do anything and had to have a girl, but after taking the Vegetable Compound I finally gained my strength back and also gained considerable in weight."—Mrs. Otto J. Geyer, R. "FLYING ROMEOS"

Better than McFadden's Flats

"Flying Romeos" has taken the trans-Pacific flying enthusiasm and converted it into a hysterical comedy co-featuring Charlie Murray and George Sidney. As erstwhile barbers who go into aviation to please their mutual love, a woman who adores aviators, they find themselves linked to an ocean flight. How a series of accidents make them out to be popular heroes, and how they start with a maniac for a pilot and how they finally land to the applause of a convention furnishes one of the most amusing chapters in screen history.

Visit Your Bank Before Starting on a Trip

A careful motorist will hardly start on a tour without first making sure that his car is in sound condition to carry him safely through to the "journey's end."

An equally careful motorist will not leave on a trip without first visiting his bank to arrange for his travel funds, that is, change his currency into TRAVELERS' CHEQUES.

Accepted everywhere—insured against loss or theft—they are the ideal, safe "travel money."
